ANNUAL REPORT

2020

A Tale of Two...Years

“It was the best of times, it was the worst of times...”

So goes Charles Dickens’ opening to A Tale of Two Cities. Cliché, perhaps. But, like all the superlatives and analogies used to describe 2020, it fits.

The 2020 we set out for was not the year we ultimately experienced. Commemorating our 35th anniversary and building toward bold strategic goals were interrupted to respond to the greatest crisis our community has ever faced.

This report tells the tale of the two distinct — yet inextricable — “years” during the 12 months of our FY20. While it wasn’t immediately evident, our work during the first half of the year was positioning us to respond to the second.

It was, of course, impossible to predict COVID — but its effects were predictable. We knew the hardest-impacted communities would be those we already helped — our own research released at the end of 2019 made that clear.

Our efforts in racial equity and legislative advocacy — acknowledging systemic causes of hunger bigger than one food bank alone can address — proved critical to our response.

And innovative programming — from Food Recovery to CalFresh Outreach — had been scaled, knowing the fragility of the government safety net and ACCFB’s role when that net fails.

The tsunami-like wave of need that appeared (you may recall) ahead of the health crisis was unprecedented. But we were ready to respond, thanks to 35 years of partnership, preparation, and passion...mixed with a certain scrappiness for which Alameda County is known.

Ironically, it turns out, a pandemic — which could have been a detour — proved to ignite an acceleration of our operation’s evolution.

Beyond “reporting” the progress of last year, this Annual Report charts the evolution.

Thank you for your amazing help in making this body of work possible.

FY 2020 AT-A-GLANCE

FACT: By April 2020 we estimate that 50% of the County was experiencing some level of food insecurity.

OUR MISSION: Alameda County Community Food Bank passionately pursues a hunger-free community
OUR VISION: Children, adults, and seniors of Alameda County do not worry about where their next meal is coming from

GROUND BREAKING HUNGER RESEARCH

Knowledge is power, especially in the fight against hunger.

With support from the Stupski Foundation, we worked with the Urban Institute to improve our understanding of the risk for food insecurity and associated stressors across Alameda County.

The year-long study is one of the most in-depth assessments ever done on food insecurity and unmet need for services. The findings made front-page news for underscoring the unique demographics of Bay Area residents who face hunger. Among the findings: Alameda County residents facing food insecurity were substantially younger, more educated, and more likely to be married with children than the general U.S. population. And, importantly, they are more likely to earn too much to qualify for government benefits.

Our research in FY20 also helped further our racial equity work and informed our early-response COVID relief efforts. With a firm understanding of the most vulnerable geographies and demographics — often a result of legacies of policies that disproportionately affect People of Color — we were able to quickly allocate resources, develop community partnerships, and open new distributions that were critical to our emergency response efforts.

A POLICY WIN FOR THE AGES

For those of us who are food insecure, access to CalFresh (aka food stamps) makes a huge difference. It wasn't until the beginning of FY20, though, that nearly 50,000 of the most vulnerable people in our community were eligible for this essential anti-hunger program.

Extending CalFresh benefits to California residents who live on Supplemental Security Income (SSI) has long been at the top of our legislative priorities. And after a decade of partnership with a statewide coalition of advocates to lobby the state government, we finally prevailed.

The impact of this expansion was enormous: the equivalent of 8.5 million meals for low-income seniors and people with disabilities in FY20.

We know the pandemic has caused even more people to rely on social safety nets, especially CalFresh. Because of this expansion, thousands of us can shop for healthy groceries and save money for other basic needs.

Data – like these maps – showing the overlap between COVID-19 and food insecurity have been instrumental to informing our response to the pandemic.

ENSURING AN ACCURATE CENSUS

The U.S. Census plays a huge role in our mission. A complete and accurate count is critical to the funding Alameda County receives for services, including hunger relief.

That's why in FY20, we partnered with the County of Alameda to help educate, promote, and encourage everyone to complete the Census.

Through the County's phone banking operation, ACCFB volunteers made 2,700 calls to historically undercounted communities. We distributed multi-lingual Census fliers in 205,000 of our Emergency Food Bags. And we assisted 1,900 clients in completing the Census through our Emergency Food Helpline.

These efforts paid off. Our County's response rate was 75.8% — an estimated 84,000 response improvement from 2010. For every person not counted, our County misses out on $2,000 per year for 10 years. This increased response rate means more funding for our community and local government to address critical needs.

FIGHTING WASTE...PROVIDING FOOD

When it comes to healthy food, we believe it should be eaten — not wasted.

As the largest food recovery organization in Alameda County, we have spent the better part of the last decade building our Food Recovery Program (FRP) to reduce waste and provide more meals for our community. FRP partners with more than 100 retailers countywide to collect millions of pounds of food surplus, recovering nearly 4.7 million pounds of healthy food in FY20.

However, expanding this critical program requires new resources.

With funding from CalRecycle, secured by Waste Management of Alameda County, we added a new hybrid truck to the program. When operating at full capacity, this truck will help us provide more than 830,000 additional meals every year for residents at risk of or experiencing hunger.

And meals are just part of the story. We estimate the food redirected to neighbors' tables through FRP last year had the environmental impact of taking 450 cars off Bay Area roads for a year.

A Community in Crisis: Responding to COVID-19

A 1,000% increase in calls to our Emergency Food Helpline. Record high unemployment. School closures. A need for food assistance like we've never experienced before. The COVID-19 pandemic changed nearly every aspect of our work. The following timeline is just a glimpse into our response efforts during the first four months of this unprecedented event.

KEEPING CHILDREN – AND THEIR FAMILIES – NOURISHED

Of all the questions that arose from COVID-19 and the shelter-in-place, few had as immediate an impact as this one: “What will school closures mean for our children?”

Children have always made up the largest single population we help, and schools have long been critical partners in our work. With schools closing in March, tens of thousands of households were at risk of losing access to healthy food. However, thanks to an outpouring of generosity — and compassionate partners — we helped ensure these families had reliable access to nutrition even when their children couldn’t be in class.

From the first moment of the shelter-in-place order, partners like the Eat. Learn. Play. Foundation and the Oakland A’s (among countless others) stepped up to help us partner with 11 school districts across the county — including 12 schools within Oakland Unified School District alone. By the end of June, we had provided more than 900,000 meals through these school partnerships.

A NEW FOOD BANK ESSENTIAL: DRIVE-THROUGH DISTRIBUTIONS

The stark images appeared within weeks of the pandemic beginning: Endless lines of cars, in every corner of the nation, waiting — often for hours at a time — for a box of emergency food.

Contactless drive-through food distributions like these quickly became a vital part of our response efforts — for both their safety and efficiency. People pull up their cars, pop their trunks, and masked volunteers place groceries inside.

In partnership with the County of Alameda, our first drive-through in Oakland opened in March, serving just 28 cars. That quickly grew to 1,000 cars, three days a week. Soon, we set up similar drive-throughs in Hayward and Pleasanton. And by the end of June, the three distributions had collectively provided 1.2 million meals to more than 62,000 families.

This drive-through model quickly became a critical means for our partner agencies as well, for which we offered guidance and training. In some cases, drive-through distributions helped agencies double or even triple the amount of food they provided.

HOMEBOUND, NOT HUNGRY

COVID-19 presented new challenges nearly every day. One of the biggest was how to help vulnerable — or even quarantined — households who could not make trips to grocery stores or emergency food distributions.

Central to this response was the need to further support partner agencies in the expansion of home delivery programs. Mercy Brown Bag, one of our largest senior-serving and home delivery partners, expanded its role during the pandemic — both through its own efforts and in the development of Oakland at Risk, which paired homebound seniors with volunteers to help with various tasks, including food pickup.

We also partnered on several pilot programs to directly deliver healthy groceries to people who were quarantined because of COVID-19 and neighbors most at risk — including individuals who are homebound and adults with disabilities. These programs, in partnership with TaskRabbit, Amazon Flex, and Alameda County Public Health Department, made contactless deliveries to nearly 7,000 households by the end of June.

CALLING ON CALFRESH

Our CalFresh (food stamps) outreach department started 17 years ago and has long been a blueprint for similar programs nationwide. Among the biggest roadblocks for prospective clients seeking CalFresh was often the first step: getting to our office for application assistance. And that was before the pandemic.

With COVID making it unsafe to host in-person application assistance meetings, we partnered with Alameda County Social Services Agency — with support from the Kaiser Foundation — to pilot CalFresh application assistance over the phone.

When the shelter-in-place order began, we hit the ground running to safely assist clients by phone, exclusively, for the first time in our program's history. Despite unprecedented demand — and the same staff size to meet it — this 3-month pilot proved that we could provide the same quality support clients need without meeting in person. Through innovation and nimbleness, we assisted 7,323 clients with CalFresh applications in FY20, an all-time high.

A new normal

By the end of June 2020, the Alameda County Community Food Bank of 2019 was hardly recognizable relative to the organization we'd become. Our programs and operations teams hired multiple staff to keep up with increased need. We were distributing 65% more food and had added 30 new distribution partners.

The immediate goal was to ensure our community could emerge from this pandemic nourished and as vibrant as ever. However, we also know this evolution over the four months from March to June was just the beginning of the organization we are to become, for the foreseeable future.

THANKS TO OUR LEADING CORPORATE PARTNERS

For fourteen consecutive years, the Food Bank has been awarded Charity Navigator’s highest rating — Four Stars — ranking us among the top 1 percent of charities nationwide.

YOUR INVESTMENT IN OUR RESPONSE

Alameda County Community Food Bank — founded in 1985 — has a long history of supporting our community through disasters of all types.

COVID-19, however, presented a complex crisis unlike any we have ever faced: Arriving like a natural disaster – swiftly and powerfully, with little warning — and persisting like the worst of recessions, where many of us may never fully recover from the economic impact.

In the early months of the pandemic, unemployment in Alameda County increased 5-6 times and we estimate up to half of the County’s 1.67 million residents were at risk of hunger. As we move into FY21, one thing is clear: We will be serving an unprecedented need, resulting from the economic fallout of this crisis, for years to come.

Thanks to an incredible outpouring of community support at the pandemic’s outset, we ended FY20 with a budget surplus. The first few months of our response presented challenges — including food shortages, competition with grocers for key items, and partner agency closures — which caused our spending to trail fundraising. Once these challenges were overcome, our spending picked up considerably. Monthly food costs, alone, nearly tripled from April 2020 (the first full month of the pandemic) to July 2020, the first month of FY21. Costs had more than quadrupled by October.

The economic effects of COVID-19 will extend far beyond the health crisis. To meet still-rising demand, we expect to provide 53 million pounds of food in FY21 — a 34 percent increase from FY20; and 64 percent more than the last full fiscal year before COVID. As donated food and government commodities are decreasing as a percent of our food procurement, we’re purchasing a much larger share. For FY21, we estimate an additional $1.5 million/month in expenses, most of which are related to our response and recovery efforts.

The next emergency is both inevitable and unpredictable as to its timing and severity. As such, the ACCFB Board of Directors has designated a $20 million reserve for Emergency Operations to ensure we are fully equipped to nourish the community during times of unexpected, significant, and protracted spikes in need.

Alameda County Community Food Bank is firmly committed to our value of Transparency. Our FY20 financial statements are available on the following page; complete, audited statements are available by request or by visiting www.accfb.org/financials.

Thank you for trusting us with this important work and joining us in the fight against hunger.
